What are serum tears?

Your tears are a complex, multi layered film that protect and lubricate your eyes.

Naturally produced tears contain important nutrients and proteins that support the health, function and structure of your eyes.

Dry eye is a lack of these natural tears. A chronic condition, dry eye can lead to itching, pain and potentially a loss of vision.

One common treatment for dry eye is artificial tears. This product provides lubrication to the surface of your eye, but lacks the natural nutrients necessary to maintain a healthy tear film.¹

If artificial tears and other medications do not improve your condition, your doctor may prescribe serum tears. Serum tears are derived from your own blood serum and provide the same nutrients and proteins as your natural tears, offering both lubrication and healing. In clinical studies, serum tears have been found to be an effective treatment for dry eye and other conditions.²
